

games, despite the historic opposition of team owners concerned with diminished gate revenues.

CONCLUSION

Cable programmers have not "siphoned" sports programming from broadcasters, but have responded to the market to increase both the quantity and quality of programming available to consumers. The public interest is best served by ensuring that cable programmers can continue to participate in the sports programming video marketplace free from artificial restrictions.

Respectfully Submitted,

RAINBOW PROGRAMMING HOLDINGS, INC.

Howard J. Symons
Leslie B. Calandro
Mintz. Levin. Cohn. Ferris.

Of Counsel:

Hank J. Ratner